OnCampus ecoAmbassadors

"Our OnCampus ecoAmbassadors are a perfect example of how young people are not just our environmental leaders of tomorrow... they can be environmental leaders today."

Lisa P. Jackson, EPA Administrator

OnCampus ecoAmbassadors are equipped with EPA materials and an online community to engage members of their campus and students across the country. They may choose to implement a number of EPA programs that are geared toward increasing environmental awareness.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) protects human health and the environment which contributes to diverse, sustainable and economically productive communities and ecosystems.

OnCampus ecoAmbassadors are college and university students who implement projects from EPA's partnership programs to help carry out the Agency's mission to protect human health and the environment. The program is open to ANY college or university student, regardless of program, age, or background.

Take Action

- Promote environmental awareness
- Help others learn how their decisions impact the environment
- Enhance leadership and team-building skills
- Learn how to improve environmental management in an organization
- Enact sustainable change on campus

Implement Environmental Projects

Working with fellow students, faculty, and school representatives, participants select projects from a list of predefined activities and events that are based on EPA programs. These projects help to raise awareness about environmental issues and educate people about how their daily actions and decisions impact the environment around them.

Broaden the Conversation

Students reach out to campus faculty and administration, and are encouraged to collaborate with existing campus organizations to broaden the conversation on environmentalism.

The OnCampus ecoAmbassadors program helps students at colleges and universities around the country green their campuses and promote environmental awareness.
