

US EPA ARCHIVE DOCUMENT

Protection Strategies Along the Mississippi River

Development of protection strategies for the Mississippi River is an integral part of the Minneapolis/St. Paul Minnesota Subarea Plan. Protection strategies for a river as large and powerful as the Mississippi challenged the preparers to develop innovative strategies that take into account an infinite number of variables. During our presentation, we will discuss the process we went through to define the variables, develop strategies to address them, and determine the validity of these strategies. We will also discuss our partnerships with other state, federal, and industry responders and planners, and how we are working together to determine protection priorities and solutions.