Candace-

I think that increasing citizen involvement is a good idea. As far as measuring success, are we going to measure success by increasing or decreasing the number of citizen petitions? I think that we want to see citizen concerns addressed by the local agency, so that the percentage of public comments resulting in a petition decreases. The training may actually lead to more petitions since the public will be more involved, but I would see success as the percent of comments leading to petitions decreasing.

Subject: need comment on draft national plan for citizen involvement in title V

Please see attached memorandum from Steve Hitte requesting comment on the OAQPS draft plan for strengthening citizen involvement in the title V program (also attached). As we hope to finalize a plan in early August, we would like your comments by July 15.

Copies of this message are being sent to title V contact persons in each Region.
