Mr. Bernard Bingham
Waste Management Administration

Baltimore, Maryland 21201

Dear Mr. Bingham:

The American Lung Association of Maryland wishes to comment on Maryland proposals to regulate hazardous waste incinerators. EPA has promulgated regulations on incinerators that call for 99.99% destruction of certain selected hazardous wastes and of the 99% removal of Hydrochloric acid (HCL) if the HCL exceeds 4 pounds per hour. In our judgment this requirement represents prudent public health policy, and we support Maryland adoption of this requirement in COMAR 10.51. The inclusion of a statewide particulate matter requirement for incinerators burning hazardous wastes in COMAR 10.51 is good public health policy in light of the need to provide uniform protection for the publics in the immediate vicinities of the hazardous waste incinerator from the long term health effects of hazardous airborne particles and to protect the environment from the build up of hazardous wastes from particle deposition.

The ALAM applauds the state's intent to close the loophole in RCRA regulations so that only hazardous wastes with significant BTU value will be excluded from the requirement that they be burned in a hazardous waste incinerator. A facility burning hazardous wastes with a significant BTU value must meet requirements for a Limited Facility Permit. This requirement represents a balanced response to the dual needs for public health protection and energy conservation.

The American Lung Association of Maryland supports requiring a small quantity hazardous waste generator burning the waste on the premises to meet the requirements for a Limited Facility Permit and an AMA Operating Permit. This again is prudent public health policy. We also support the requirement that collectors of small quantities greater than 1,000 Kg/month of hazardous waste should be required to meet the incinerator requirements. We support requiring the burning of waste oil only in equipment with a Limited Facility Permit and AMA Operating Permit, because of the presence of PCB's, halogens, sulfur and lead in most waste oils. In the case of oil containing PCB's the incinerator requirements should assure that sufficient temperatures are maintained for the destruction of PCB's, since PCB's are hazardous and can persist in the environment.
